Public Call for Evidence

Protecting our Marine Environment

Our marine environment is important to everyone who enjoys spending leisure time on or around the water, those who make a living from seafood and the sea, and to future generations. But how well do we look after it?

The Environment Scrutiny Panel is starting a new review into the monitoring and regulation of Jersey's coastal water quality.

Whether you swim, surf, fish or float - tell us what you think about the state of the sea around our island!

If you have any comments on how we look after Jersey's coastal waters or would like more information about this review

Please contact us before Tuesday 31st August by:
